This enrichment time is meant for band students to practice either individually or in small groups, and will allow for the direction and guidance of band directors along the way.
McCotter	Meditative Art for the Non-Artist and Artist Alike	You don't have to be considered an "artist" to benefit from an hour of silent creativity. In this class the student and facilitator will silently draw, sketch, and color using pen, marker, pencil, pastels, and paper. Some supplies will be provided, but if you own supplies you prefer to use bring them for your own use as well. Although there will be suggested prompts provided each week, you are not required to create according to any standard. As this is a Meditative Art class, there will be absolutely no talking, sleeping, or academic work in the session. Phones may be used only with headphones for the purpose of providing music for your contemplative art practice. Electronic devices with stylus may be used for the creation of art only and must be checked by the facilitator. No matter what, the student must be creating something throughout the entire session. "Meditative Art...brings one to the present moment, makes them aware and attentive, peaceful and quiet, connecting one to themselves, to their 'higher self' or a higher power." - Meditativeartsschool.com
Mosley	Solo and Ensemble Enrichment	This enrichment is offered only for students who are in band. This will be time to work on solo and ensemble material, have individual practice time and get individual help from the band directors with music.
